Proverbs 3:5-6

Introduction

If there were a couple of verses that summed up all of the proverbs we will read this month, it may be these listed above and on the front cover. The working definition of a proverb is a stated general truth or piece of advice. Whether it's truth or advice, the proverb is intended to head one in a positive direction and warn of evil around the corner.

We will simply read the chapter in Proverbs which corresponds with the day of the month and then read 30-31 on the last day. This will include Sunday which is a little different. I would suggest not spending too much time with the ones that are not easily understood and save those for a group discussion at some time. Lean into those which speak to an area of concern in your life or give direction you have been looking for.

Proverbs in general come from every culture and every philosophy and often times can be helpful to be a better person. However, these we will read are proverbs which seek to give Biblical wisdom and help you grown spiritually. This makes them all the more important.

I'll focus on significant verses in the daily devotion. If you aren't part of the email devotion send me an email to abeasley@jasperfirstumc.com and I'll add you.
